

COMMITTEE OF CONCERNED SHAREHOLDERS

10732 Farragut Drive
Culver City, CA 90230

<http://www.ConcernedShareholders.com>
Information@ConcernedShareholders.com

December 8, 2005

VIA EMAIL: Rule-Comments@SEC.gov

Mr. Jonathan G. Katz
Secretary
Securities and Exchange Commission
450 Fifth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20549-0609

Re: Internet Availability of Proxy Materials
Proposed Rule S7-10-05; Release No. 34-52926

Dear Mr. Katz:

This letter comments upon proposed Rule S7-10-05. There is a major nuance to the proposed rule. The proposed rule should be modified to prohibit efforts by corporations to hinder and/or interfere with communication between Shareholders. The Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC") should consider eliminating the unreasonable hoops through which corporations now cause Shareholders to jump when Shareholders seek Shareholder lists and other information, which is needed to engage in electronic and other communication.

I. Proxy Campaign of Committee

The Committee of Concerned Shareholders ("Committee"), formerly known as the Committee of Concerned Luby's Shareholders, consisting of shareholders of Luby's, Inc. ("Luby's") who met on a Yahoo! Finance Message Board in 2000, is the first and only grass-roots shareholder group to conduct a formal proxy contest. Luby's, headquartered in San Antonio, Texas, was then a near 230-unit cafeteria chain with annual sales of approximately $500 million. Its shares are listed for trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Committee's Director-nominees received 24% of the votes cast. Two (2) of the Shareholder Proposals that it supported (i.e., removal of all anti-takeover defenses, annual election of all Directors) received approximately 60% of the votes cast.

Mr. Jonathan G. Katz
December 8, 2005
Page Two

Some have said that the Committee's efforts with Luby's caused the departure of its former Chief Executive Officer and President, the nomination of a Director-candidate with hands-on restaurant experience, the entry of a restaurant experienced white-knight/investor and the relinquishment of position by the former Chairman of the Board.

The Committee's efforts revealed the substantial difficulties, e.g., obtaining Shareholder lists, that individual Shareholders would face in an attempt to hold Directors accountable. Further, it showed that the extent of Shareholder dissatisfaction could be substantially greater than the size of stock holdings of Director-candidate nominators. In our proxy contest at Luby's, even though our Director-candidate nominators held about 1/4% of the outstanding stock, our candidates garnered 24% of the vote.

II. Committee's Access to Shareholder Lists

In an attempt to identify fellow Shareholders, the Committee was subjected to a royal-runaround that may be typical of the efforts made by corporations to entrench incumbent Directors. The Committee sought separate Shareholder and non-objecting beneficial owner ("NOBO") lists from Luby's. Our purpose was proper. Luby's was incorporated in Delaware. Delaware Corporation Law, Section 220, provides, "Where the stockholder seeks to inspect ... list of stockholders ... the burden of proof shall be upon the corporation to establish that the inspection such stockholder seeks is for an improper purpose." Luby's engaged in a series of games to attempt to deny the Committee's legitimate rights.

Luby's, initially, relied upon every legal technicality to deny our request. After we overcame those hurdles, Luby's feigned an inability to comprehend the request. Despite a very explicit request, Luby's offered to provide less desirable alternative information. Luby's referred the Committee to American Stock Transfer ("AST"), its stock transfer agent, to obtain the requested information. AST stated that it could not provide the information until Luby's provided written authorization and that Luby's had not done so. The Committee asked the SEC for assistance to obtain the Shareholder lists. The SEC claimed that it was a matter of state law and declined our request. After the Committee had engaged legal counsel and threatened to bring legal action in Delaware, Luby's finally provided the written authorization to AST. AST then demanded payment of substantial funds in order to produce the requested information on a computer disk. (The Committee had requested that the data be provided in an Excel format on a floppy disk after hearing that some transfer agents produced such data on magnetic tapes where machines that could read the tapes were substantially non-existent.) The Committee repeatedly requested that Luby's and AST justify their alleged costs and/or provide a copy of a published schedule of charges. The requests were ignored. During that time, Luby's mailed literature to its Shareholders. Evidently, Luby's had used the same Shareholder information that we had requested. The Committee asked Luby's to produce that mailing list without charge. That request was ignored. As the proxy mailing date fast approached, the Committee was, in effect, coerced to meet AST's demands. No NOBO list was ever provided.

Mr. Jonathan G. Katz
December 8, 2005
Page Three

Essentially, Luby's refused to recognize its legal obligations to produce promptly the requested materials at its additional cost, which was nada, zip, zilch.

Unless constricted by formal SEC rules, corporations could easily play the same indefensible dilatory game with all Shareholders --- Individuals or Institutions --- who wish to communicate with one another for proxy solicitation purposes.

III. Conclusion

The SEC should visit the entire issue of Shareholder communications for proxy solicitation purposes and not limit itself to Internet posting privileges. For such a communication system to operate fairly, it is essential that corporations be required to PROMPTLY provide dissident candidates with ALL of the corporation's shareholder contact information, e.g. email addresses, which it possesses, at minimal cost.

A fair proxy solicitation process is essential to Director accountability. A cornerstone of that process is the ability of Shareholders to communicate effectively with one another. The proposed rule does not assure that ability. It is not fair when Shareholders only hear the messages of corporate sponsored Directors seeking to be elected or re-elected. Such is not conducive to Director accountability.

Please communicate with me in the event that further information is desired.

Very truly yours,

LES GREENBERG,
Chairman

LG:ms